Tuition Grant Donated to MWC

Director of Public Information

Mary Washington College will begin offering its first full-tuition scholarship this spring as a result of a $175,000 gift that is being made to the college's endowment fund.

Announcement of the new scholarship program was made September 18 by Dr. William M. Anderson, Jr., president of Mary Washington College.

The announcement followed a special meeting of the college's Board of Visitors, which passed a resolution accepting the gift and establishing the new scholarship program.

The gift is being made by the family of Mary Siegrist Hinz, a 1981 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Mary Washington College, who died tragically in 1984 following a bicycling accident in Florida.

Funds for the new scholarship program are being provided by her husband, Dan H. Hinz of Arrington, Va. and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Siegrist of Alexandria, Va.

The $175,000 gift will fund the "Mary Siegrist Hinz Leadership Awards Program," which when fully endowed will provide a full year's tuition and fees at Mary Washington College to four rising juniors and seniors who meet the program's awards criteria.

Selection will be made by a panel of Mary Washington faculty and staff, chaired by Dr. Conrad Warlick, vice president for admissions and financial aid.

Selection will be based on characteristics that exemplified Hinz's career as a student at MWC.

According to a program description, award "candidates must possess characteristics of citizenship which reflect a concern for others and an unselfish desire to contribute to the welfare of others."

Candidates also must have demonstrated "athletic excellence" in organized athletic competition, at the varsity, club or intramural level.

Additionally, candidates must have definite career objectives and these must be outlined to the selection committee.

Hinz was a summa cum laude graduate of MWC, with a major in psychology.

At the time of her death she was enrolled as a third year law student at the College of William and Mary, with an academic ranking in the top five percent of her class.

While at MWC she was president of the national psychology society Psi Chi, secretary of the national social science honorary society Pi Gamma Mu and a resident of the college's honors senior residence hall.

She was active in the college's honor system as a counsellor and defender, and was a representative to the Student Senate, among many other honors and distinctions.

In addition to her academic and professional activities, she developed a reputation as one of the college's finest athletes, competing in golf, tennis, racquetball and softball. Upon graduation she was named to the National Register of Outstanding College Graduates.

In accepting the gift, Michael B. Dowdy, vice president for college relations, said, "The establishment of this scholarship program is a fitting memorial to all that Mary Siegrist Hinz accomplished at Mary Washington College."

"In addition, this type of program helps us fulfill one of our greatest needs in being able to recognize and assist our student leaders. We are extremely grateful to Mr. Dan Hinz and the Robert Siegrist family for underwriting this program."

The Leadership Awards Program will be initiated this December with the selection of a current junior at MWC for a spring semester award.

The program's endowment will require a total of four years to be fully funded, after which time four students will be selected for Leadership Awards each year.

The $175,000 gift will become a part of Mary Washington College's total endowment fund, which now exceeds $6.5 million.

The Mary Siegrist Hinz Leadership Awards will increase in value as tuition and fees increase on an annual basis at Mary Washington.

The award for academic year 1987-88 will be in excess of $2,100 and may also include funds for the purchase of textbooks, depending on the annual investment return of the

AIDS: Information displayed

by KEN MOREFIELD

"AIDS is still a taboo subject," said Brenda Sloan, Special Collection Librarian at E. Lee Trinkle, who has coordinated an exhibit on AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome).

Sloan began to gather the literature and organize the exhibit in June so that students "would be provided with information, because we are in the information business," she said.

The exhibit consists primarily of posters, to get student attention, free pamphlets dealing with various aspects of the disease and bibliographies for further information.

Sloan said that she received most of the material from the Department of Health and the American Red Cross, but that she was also referred to other agencies.

She said that she looked for material which would provide the necessary information to students without taking a posture of condoning or trying to regulate behaviour.

She did hope though that students would become aware that the library had resources such as books and government documents through which they could learn about AIDS.

To try to insure that students would be aware that the information was available, she also went to several campus sources to try to spread the word.

She tried to get the exhibit mentioned at faculty meetings, she asked Head Residents to bring it up at Sloan believes the information has been well received. Student help and staff at the library have received many questions and comments concerning AIDS and the free informa-

Another indication of campus interest was shown through the distribution of an AIDS quiz and

Perkins Elected in Run-off

by ASHLEY RYLAND
Staff Reporter

Freshman Joe Perkins was re-elected as the freshman class vice president on September 28 after his initial victory in a September 23 election was contested.

In a letter of contention, written by one of the junior class officers, Perkins was said to be violating on of "Class Council's election procedures," according to junior class president Kim Rivenbark.

The junior class officers are responsible for holding freshman class elections. Rivenbark said that the name of the junior class officer who wrote the letter contesting the election would be kept "confidential."

Perkins said that the election was contested because he was spotted with 150 feet of Seacobeck (where student voting was taking place) after casting his vote in the election.

Perkins said that candidates are not allowed to campaign or "loiter" inside the 150 foot area, but said that he was waiting there to meet friends. Perkins said that he waited no longer than five minutes in the area and did not do any campaigning.

After the letter contesting the election was submitted, the junior class officers "met with both the contesting party and the candidate in question and decided on an appropriate course of action," said Rivenbark.

"The decision to hold a re-election for freshman class vice president was recognized to be in the best interest of every candidate," she said.

According to Rivenbark, the junior class officer who contested Perkins' election was excluded from the vote on whether or not there would be a new election.

Freshmen Beth Salerno and Tiffany Packard were Perkins' opponents in both elections. Salerno said the accusation made against Perkins was an "insignificant technicality."

Salerno was "annoyed" at the need for a second election because she said she had "put alot of effort into the first election."

Both Perkins and Salerno said that there seemed to be a lot of "confusion" amongst the junior class officers in deciding how to handle the contested election. "They didn't know where to go," said Perkins.

Perkins also opposed the fact that a junior contested a freshman election. "It should have been someone from the freshman class who contested it," he said.

Rivenbark said the number of freshmen students voting in the re-election was "about the same" as in the first election. Salerno said that some freshmen who did not vote in the first election did vote on September 28.

Perkins said, "I knew the vote count both times and I won by a greater margin this time than I did the first time."

A student reported a bicycle stolen from a dorm bike rack. The bicycle, valued at $250, was recovered by a city officer.

Boughner Lectures on Love

by KELLY GILES
Staff Reporter

On September 29, Dr. Robert Boughner presented a lecture entitled "Catullus and the Invention of Love."

Dr. Boughner began the lecture with a small biography of Catullus. He then went on to describe the basic principles and rules of love that were followed in ancient times and how Catullus related to these ideas.

According to Dr. Boughner, "Catullus argued that romantic love should be a part of an institution like marriage."

To support his statements, Dr. Boughner read many translations from the works of Catullus.

The lecture was well attended by over 45 people, including the CPR Sex in Society class, numerous faculty members, and various other interested MWC students.

Dr. Boughner's witty and certainly unique style was well received by the audience.

One student was heard to comment, "Boughner is the best speaker we've had so far."

Thursday's lecture was the sixth in a series held for the Sex in Society class. This was Dr. Boughner's second and final lecture of the series.

Lisa Mansberger will give a talk on the Savannah Science Museum's threatened species research project in Georgia on Friday, October 9 at 4 pm.

Mansberger spent part of last summer working with the loggerhead sea turtle project conducted at Wassaw Island National Wildlife Refuge, located near Savannah, Georgia.

The talk is free and open to the public in Combs 100.

Editorial

Saturday night I went to the Pub expecting to have a good time dancing and partying with my friends. I was met at the door with loud music and screams from a so-called band and a person asking me for $1.

At 10:30 pm, the crowd was very sparse. I guess my friends and I should have taken notice of the lack of excitement and left.

Luckily for NOW (sponsor of the band) we stayed and they made a bit of money.

I was quite astounded with the performance of the band, Schmovie. I have never heard such unique lyrics. It was surprising that the only words we could understand were obscenities.

The lyrics came across as "Wa, wa, wa-wa-wa, wa, ——— you!!" Such pleasant sounds for a Saturday night at the Pub!

The band's stage presence was in incredibly bad taste. The members made obscene gestures to each other, in addition to their obscenities to the audience.

This was very appealing to the audience since cries of "Take a break" and "Leave" were heard more often than not.

It was embarrassing to those of us at my table to have a band such as this in the Pub, since there were parents of a student sitting at the table next to us. I would personally like to thank the band for representing MWC in such a manner.

To make matters worse, the DJ played the exact same kind of "music" as that of the band's during the breaks. Therefore, people were not too thrilled about dancing to music they were trying to forget.

Since people were not dancing, they were drinking, heavily. This is usually not as big of a deal as it was Saturday because usually people can dance off a lot of what they drink. Not so when the band is so musically inclined as to play music that sounds like a child throwing a tantrum.

I think that the DJ finally got the hint that people were not really enjoying themselves because she eventually began to play some music that could be danced to by more than just a few.

The only problem was that as the clock wound down for the evening, people were finally beginning to have a decent time.

It's bad enough when there is a band in the Pub on a weekend night, but it's even worse when the band is rude, obnoxious and worst of all, obscene.

I know that since there is no other place to have bands perform, they must perform in the Pub. I also know that since there is not a lot of other things to do but go to the Pub, there should be more consideration of the majority of the students wishes.

I am in no way accusing the Pub management, SAE, NOW or even the band (even though I do think they need a crash course in etiquette), I am just stating that there was no excuse for the type of "entertainment" that was presented on Saturday night.

Educating for Peace

During the weekend of September 26 and 27 in Charlottesville, Virginia, a group of students from colleges and universities from around the state gathered for a unique meeting which was the first of its kind in the country.

Local chapters of United Campuses To Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM) came together to learn from each other's experiences and to form a state coalition of student activist groups concerned with the threat of nuclear weapons.

Progressive student groups from the University of Virginia, James Madison University, Mary Washington College, Randolph-Macon Women's College, the College of William and Mary, Virginia Tech and Lynchburg College all spent the weekend discussing ways of strengthening their presence in the grassroots disarmament movement.

The Charlottesville meeting, coordinated by Emily Hoole of JMU and Ronni Fuchs of UVA, was attended by ten members of the Progressive Student Union of Mary Washington College.

For those involved in the workshops and brainstorming sessions of the weekend, the experience was an enlightening one.

A number of previously isolated groups of student activists pooled their energies and discovered that they had a potential strength to be a more influential force at both the grassroots and national levels.

Among activities discussed by the schools involved was the possibility of coalition representatives travelling monthly to Washington, D.C. to lobby Congress on arms control and nuclear weapons test ban legislation.

Also explored was the idea of staging coordinated state-wide demonstrations on campuses to speak out against the threat of the military-industrial complex.

The success of the Charlottesville coalition meeting is a reflection of the growing student movement for global peace and justice.

Not only are the groups growing in size here in Virginia—JMU's group has grown from thirty to over one greater force in the world than it is now.

Behind this power of education, there must be students committed to the calling of a moral responsibility for the fate of the earth.

Such a movement has happened in this nation before, when many angry youth marched nonviolently for the cause of civil rights during the late 1950's through the early 1970's, and the time is now for a renewal of that commitment to the integrity of humanity.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., one of this nation's greatest nonviolent leaders, once spoke of the duty of education.

He said that "the function of education...is to teach one to think intensively and to think critically. But education which stops with efficiency may prove the greatest menace to society. The most dangerous criminal may be the man gifted with reason but with no morals."

"We must remember that intelligence is not enough. Intelligence plus character—that is the goal of true education. The complete education gives one not only power of concentration, but worthy objectives upon which to concentrate."

"The broad education will, therefore, transmit to one not only the accumulated knowledge of the race but also the accumulated experience of social living."

If this is the purpose of education, it is the duty of the student and the teacher to pursue this goal. The Charlottesville coalition meeting is but one example of students teaching themselves some of the basic points of social responsibility.

hundred in the past year—but students from nations around the world are calling out for a rule by the whole.

In the past year, Korean students have been a major force crying out against the military government in that nation. Chinese students have issued declarations calling for democracy.

Young, black, South Africans, being denied an education, are being tortured in prisons by an oppressive regime itself ruled by fear.

In Europe and the United States, an increasingly vocal youth continues to plea for an end to the nuclear arms race.

Hopefully, the stirrings of the progressive student movement, which have been growing since World War I, will someday help to eliminate the militaristic nationalism that has made this one of the bloodiest centuries of human history.

To overcome the dangers of a war deterrent based on the threat of annihilation, education must become a

Bookstore accused of negligence

To the Editor

This letter is in reference to the negligence of Mary Washington College's bookstore, regarding their failure in ordering the adequate number of books.

In one of our classes, a study guide is required along with the text. When we went to purchase our books, the text was available but the study guide was nowhere to be found. As a result, our professor was forced to change his syllabus, and we were not able to adequately study for our exam.

Our class is not alone in this dilemma, as others suffer from the same problem. In addition, many books that have been purchased, have been found to be faulty (i.e. missing pages, poor binding, wrong computer disks, etc.).

We feel cheated and disillusioned by being forced to pay an over-escalated price for books that aren't worth squat.

We demand that this problem be examined more thoroughly and ultimately rectified.

New Faces: English Department

by STEVE PAUL
Staff Reporter

Due to the increase of students this fall at MWC, the Department of English, Linguistics and Speech has added six members to its staff.

Dr. Connie Bellamy, joining MWC from St. Lawrence University in New York, teaches Women in Literature, The Novel and The American Novel to 1945.

Connie Bellamy

Bellamy has a bachelor's degree in Philosophy, a master's and a doctorate degree in English.

Outside of class, antiques and historical buildings are among her interests.

Dr. Joel Haefner teaches English 101, Modern Drama and Newsgathering.

Haefner comes to MWC from the University of Iowa where he earned a bachelor's and doctorate degree in English. He also instructed undergraduate courses there.

Dr. Haefner hopes to give students "exposure to a variety of perspectives and an enthusiasm for the subject."

While not in class, Haefner spends his time with his wife and new daughter, Alyssa. He also enjoys his pedigree standard poodles.

The department's new Linguistics instructor is Judith Parker. She comes to MWC from Brown University where she received a master's degree.

Parker teaches one English course, Short Fiction, and two Linguistics courses, Introduction to Linguistics and The English Language. In the spring, Parker will reintroduce the course, Psycholinguistics.

In her spare time, Parker enjoys swimming, guitar and composing music.

Judith Parker

Vanessa Haley, a part time instructor teaches two creative writing classes. She has a bachelor's degree in English and a masters in Fine Arts.

Haley is particularly impressed with the high caliber of students here at MWC.

Out of class, she enjoys riding, theater and art.

Peggy Hair teaches two sections of English 101. While teaching, she is also attending classes here at MWC in order to complete her MBA.

When not involved in school, Hair enjoys weaving, spinning, gardening and folk music.

Peggy Hair

Thomas Moisan received his undergraduate degree in English with a minor in classics from Holy Cross College. He later earned a master's and PhD at Harvard University.

Before coming to MWC, Moisan taught at Middlebury College in Vermont and then Arkansas State University.

This semester Moisan teaches two Shakespeare classes and Writing Workshop.

Moisan's specialty is the relationship of Shakespeare's rhetoric to the historical consciousness of his times. He takes special pride in his research, leaving no time for extra-curricular activities because "research makes one a better teacher."

Faculty Profile:

A Positive Outlook on Superpowers

by SANDY SEAY
Staff Reporter

The recently published book by Professor Richard J. Krickus, entitled Superpowers in Crisis: Implications of Domestic Discord, has attracted considerable media attention.

A press conference held at the National Press Club was shown nationwide on C-SPAN.

On September 19, Krickus was available at Waldenbooks in Spotylvania Mall to sign copies of his book. This event did not generate much enthusiasm because, as Krickus notes, "There are not many readers in this area."

In his book, Krickus argues that the accumulation of domestic crises within the Soviet Union and the United States is the best predictor of future East-West relations.

Domestic turmoil in the Soviet Union is a consequence of a troubled economy, conflicting ethnic groups and rising opposition in Eastern Europe, says Krickus.

These three basic power struggles are forcing Gorbachev to protect his power base through various reforms. The economic crisis facing the Soviet Union is also provoking a reduction in its profile in the Third World.

Because of a lack of resources, the U.S.S.R. can no longer afford to maintain its profile in the Third World.

"The United States," according to Krickus, "is stricken by an array of problems capable of producing the same level of crisis afflicting the Soviet Union. U.S. political institutions are gridlocked, a two-tiered society is polarized by growing economic inequality, and the culture is in disarray."

The U.S. is in a state of political paralysis. There is confusion, on the part of the Democrats as well as the Republicans, about the role of government.

Some contend that the government is too big or too strong. Krickus, however, argues that "the problem is weak government, not big government."

The real significance of domestic dissent within the superpowers is the role it will play in future East-West relations, particularly in the sphere of arms control.

Both sides recognize that there are limits to their power, facilitating a reshaping of their views towards arms control agreements. Both superpowers are realizing the need to turn their attention toward domestic issues.

Krickus asserts that "international pressures will compel the superpowers to reach an arms control agreement, reduce their commitment abroad, cut defense outlays, and seek new ways to reduce East-West tensions."

In other words, instability within the superpowers will result in stability between the superpowers. The most serious threat to this new stability, however, is failure by Gorbachev to modernize Soviet society.

"If Gorbachev fails," said Krickus, "the Soviet Union will resort back to the cold war rhetoric." This situation will jeopardize the prospective future of East-West relations.

Rocking in the Rain

by PETER MATHIS
Staff Reporter

Only a car salesman would try to tell you that Saturday's First Annual Rocktoberfest was a complete success.

There were, as you know, a few snags—the main one being that the weather was so lousy that if I tried to describe it, my editor would have coronary arrest.

Suffice it to say that an enormous monsoon, apparently imported from India, moved the whole 'fest into Willard's living room.

Sounds bad, huh? Well, fortunately, the weather was about the only thing that really went wrong.

Once everyone accepted the fact that—no, they weren't outside, things got down to business and plastic cups mysteriously began to sprout from fingertips everywhere.

Since the drinking started much earlier than 4:30 when the first band began to play, many people mistakenly thought they were listening to Twisted Sister and immediately went out on the porch.

In reality, however, they were listening to the sounds of Not Even, a five-piece band from the D.C. area. Not Even played a variety of their own stuff.

Well actually to be fair, they did include some covers, and really their material was pretty good. Perhaps they were just unappreciated.

In any case, most of the revelers had gone outside by then, making the porch the heart of the party, as well as making it more difficult to obtain a hamburger or some McDonald's orange juice.

And so the Rocktoberfest continued, with Not Even finally packing it in around 6:30 pm, and New Keys starting up at 7:15 pm or so.

New Keys, also a D.C. band, played some of their own material as well as a number of classic rock covers.

Partiers seemed to approve and responded with some dancing here and there. New Keys ended it all by finishing their set around 9:30.

All told, the Rocktoberfest was not a dismal failure by any means. Those that were there showed real spirit by partying instead of just complaining about the weather.

There was plenty of food, plenty of drinks, and plenty of music and even some prizes that were raffled off for those that possessed the coveted Rocktoberfest cups (raffle numbers were on the bottoms).

And on a final good note, the R.D.'s of Willard and nearby Mercer reported that the crowd behaved well, with no reports of damage, perhaps opening more doors to future parties.

So thanks to Willard for throwing the party; to SAE for signing the bands; and to some cool R.A.'s and R.D.'s for not busting on anyone.

Let's hope some more Rocktoberfests and better weather are on the way.

Debate Team Earns Respect

by BETH HILL
Staff Reporter

Should the United States substantially reduce its military commitments to NATO member states?

Many people may not be able to answer this question with a definite "yes" or "no," but at least a handful of students at Mary Washington are capable of answering it and quite a few more controversial questions about current issues.

These students belong to the MWC Debate Union. Yes, Mary Washington has a debate team.

The team was formed in the Fall of 1985 under the supervision of David Hair, an Instructor of Speech here on campus.

According to official statistics, the Debate Union did rather well during their first two years of competition. They now have both Junior Varsity and Novice teams, neither having any previous experience.

Together, the two teams have won eleven plaques, cups and trophies, and in 1985 the team won the Newcomer's Award from the International Policy Debate Society.

They also expanded their membership from only four members last year to twenty-four members this year—three returning and twenty-one new.

Anyone may join the debate team, and some even receive one credit per semester for actually competing.

However, long hours of researching enormous amounts of information, and even longer hours of practice, takes up a substantial amount of time.

Members Debbie Riddle and Kristin Flowe stress that anyone thinking about joining the team needs to be able to carefully budget their time between homework and work for the team in order to be successful.

But Riddle insists that "if you really love debating, you'll do the work."

Both Riddle and Flowe received several Speaker's Awards for the Junior Varsity and Novice teams last year.

"Debating helps you with a lot of skills that you can use in life—like speech, logic and analysis. It teaches you how to prepare for things, and it prepares you for life values," said Flowe.

The Debate Union has competed against and defeated the University of Virginia, George Washington University, George Mason University and the U.S. Naval Academy.

Riddle and Flowe sum up their feelings by saying that the reason that they are so proud of the debate team is because "it is an academic competition—something that uses your intellect. That's why you go to college."

Answer to last week's puzzle

Here's your chance to answer some questions about your future. The National Security Agency's Professional Qualification Test (PQT) can tell you if a career with us is right for you.

For many people, it's proven just right. At NSA, we process foreign intelligence information... safeguard our government's communications... and secure our nation's computer systems. Our critical missions provide a myriad of opportunities.

Anyone interested in opportunities in the following areas should take the test:

Data Systems	International
Information	Relations
Sciences	Language
Library Science	Communications
Research	Analysis
Operational	Management
Research	Administration
Political Science

If your PQT score indicates good potential, you'll be considered for employment. (If you're a graduate with a degree in Electronic, Electrical or Computer Engineering, Computer Science, or a Slavic, Near East or Asian language, you can schedule an interview without taking the test. Just see your Placement Office.)

Registration for the test is free. Pick up the PQT bulletin at your placement office, or write to NSA. Do it soon. Registration forms must be received by October 9. The test will be given October 24.

The PQT is your opportunity to prove what you can do with intelligence. Give it a try. It may be your personal answer to professional questions.

Register by October 9th to take the PQT Test!

New Campus Recreation Program Added

by DONNA WHITNEY
Sports Editor

This year MWC has expanded its recreation program by providing services for students, faculty and staff. Julie Smith heads this program as the campus recreation and intramural director.

Smith sponsors the sports clubs which include the men's and women's rugby clubs. She also coordinates the aerobic dance sessions and intramural sports program.

Smith's philosophy is "I believe students should develop and run their own clubs. I'm mainly here in the advisory capacity."

For the intramural sports program, Smith would like to see more participation and publicity. She said, "not many people know about me or my office, and I wish more of the MWC community would participate."

Smith emphasizes that everything is student run. So far, Razzle Dazzle Football is the only intramural sport that has ended for the season.

Smith said, "I did not have much participation, only four teams, but once people hear about intramurals, it will pick up next year. 5150 Chuds were the winning team for intramural football—outscored their opponents 227-97."

Men's and women's intramural volleyball has just recently started. Smith was pleased to have enough participants to schedule 14 teams.

"The games are going on now, and the response is terrific," said Smith.

Smith emphasizes that she would like to see more participation. In order to participate in a program, the person has to fill out an entry form and Smith does what is called instant scheduling.

During instant scheduling, Smith corresponds the schedule to the available times of the student. "We work around anyone's schedule so as not to interfere with school," said Smith.

Sports left for the season include co-rec volleyball and Sports Trivia Bowl. Entry forms for volleyball open on October 21 and close October 28. Sports Trivia Bowl entries open November 4 and close November 11.

Sports Trivia Bowl tests sports knowledge and encourages all "arm chair quarterbacks" to participate. The questions are similar to those of Trivial Pursuit, such as "What is the official sport of Taiwan?"

Smith, who comes from Charleston, Illinois as Assistant Director of Intramurals at Eastern Illinois University, sees the program as having great potential. "So far we have been successful."

Next semester, the activities include basketball, inner tube water polo, softball, ultimate frisbee, tennis and golf pitching. Golf pitching is a sport where there is a target and the person who hits the ball closest to the target wins.

Women's Soccer Continues Streak

by DONNA WHITNEY
Sports Editor

The 18th ranked Division 3 soccer team is having a winning season with eight victories under their belt so far.

Coach Pete Ginnegar credits the team being able to finish plays. "The team has improved a great deal and filled some gaps from last year that they were weak in."

Forwards Kristi Mehew and Ronnie Pile are his strong members up front with senior Ellen Henderson, junior Brenda Nix and sophomore Susan Cryer in the back.

Coming from a 9-7-1 season last year, the team has the ability to attack according to Ginnegar. "This way, the team is tough competition," said Ginnegar.

The team is young with only two seniors and three juniors with the rest underclassmen. Ginnegar sees the team as championship material because the team members are capable of playing different positions.

The team has faced strong competitive opponents. "Virginia Wesleyan was a tough game and when we beat them 2-1, I was pleased because it shows they are hard working," said Ginnegar.

The team has an 8-0 record and face North Carolina Wesleyan at home at 3:30 Tuesday.

Despite injuries, the MWC men's Rugby Club won their fifth game, defeating VCU, making it a 5-0 season so far.

President Mike Ausley credits the forwards for playing an excellent game. "VCU had a big squad, but our team, especially the forwards, kept with them. We also had a good goal line stand at the end of the game."

Because of the injuries, many people were playing out of their normal position.

The Rugby team, who were second in the state last year, have many returning players. "We will lose a lot of players at the end of the year because we have quite a few seniors," said Ausley.

Ausley said the team hasn't been playing as well as their potential, but they are still doing well enough to win their games.

He also credits the new campus recreation director Julie Smith with her help. "Smith is going to do a lot for the team, her position was really needed," said Ausley.

The four-year old club would like to see more administrative support with their games. Ausley said, "We have student support and we would like to see the administration become more involved and understand the sport."

The club hopes to reach the finals again and win. Last year they lost to Virginia Tech after beating VMI and JMU.

Their last home game is October

24 against ODU. Next week they face St. Mary's College in Maryland.

The women's rugby club lost 16-3 in their first game of the season Saturday to University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

The three point score came in the second half from Jennifer Regnault of a penalty kick.

Club president Diana Schwera said, "the team is very young. Almost all of the players are underclassmen and have never played in a game before."

The squad is large with thirty members. They expect to improve with time and practice. For the season, they have six scheduled games. Their home games are October 25, 31 and November 14.

CHARGE, from page 4

Mancuso explained that whereas with last year, the reply cards were sent out in the spring, this year they will be mailed out in the fall. Mancuso added that in last year's case, a lot of seniors already had credit cards.

However, because of First Federal's lower interest rates, seniors were able to use the new charge card to pay off the balance of the old card which was then discarded.

The program will benefit both the bank and the students. "The bank hopes to attract customers for a long time, and the students will find the program to be a great opportunity to build up a credit history," Mancuso said.

questionnaire written to correspond with a television special on the subject.

Two sets of copies needed to be made because demand was so great, said Sloan.

Another source of feedback were off campus visitors from Career Day, many of whom visited the library and noted surprise that Mary Washington would have such a topical exhibit.

Sloan said she hoped that the information exhibit would act as a stimulus for students to pursue other ways to become educated about AIDS and how to avoid it, such as a one-time campus information workshop or simply visiting the health center for more information.

The AIDS exhibit will continue at Trinkle until the first of November.
